RESIDENTS on Young street complain of the city scavenger, saying that he collected all the soil and manure on the above street but left a pile of tin cans, dead chickens and bottles there. ON Wednesday evening a Portuguese man was discovered on the premises of Mr. Geo. W. Smith, of Benson, Smith & Co., who lives on Kukul street. It is reported that while the bark Elsinore was last here arrangements were made whereby the bark, with lumber from the Pacific Coast for Australia, will call here and take the South Sea Island return laborers to their homes for $3,000. COL. Thompson received a letter by last mail from his son, Percy W., third lieutenant of the U. S. revenue cutter Dix, stating that in cruising on the coast of Florida they met a million of frozen fish, and every day for two or three weeks they could count dozens of them, although the thermometer was only at 30 degrees. Also, that in returning from a hunting expedition on shore, his son trod on a catfish, the dorsal fin of which penetrated the sole of his boot an inch into the foot, causing a poisonous wound that laid him up for some time.

BUSINESS MEETING OF THE LIBRARY.

The regular meeting of the Board of Officers of the Library Association was held last evening. A report was presented by the chairman of the hall and library committee, giving interesting details concerning the work of the association. The circulating department had on the 1st inst. books out in the hands of 124 different persons. The catalogue now shows 4,850 volumes, being an increase of 1,874 volumes since the association moved into its present building just a year and a half ago. About 600 of these books were from the bequest of Queen Emma, who it will be remembered left her library to the association. The remainder have been acquired partly by purchase and partly by gift, the largest individual contributor having been Mr. A. J. Cartwright. The committee on a printed catalogue reported progress and were continued. Matters pertaining to the work of the entertainment committee were discussed at some length, but no action taken which calls for public notice at this time. The committee hope to have something to announce at an early day.

PATHETIC ORIGIN OF A POEM.

Doubtless many of our readers have read General W. S. Lytle's fine poem, "Cleopatra," written the night before the battle in which he was killed. The Pittsburg Leader relates the romantic circumstances under which it was written. They were told by the late Colonel Realf to a gentleman.

He spoke of the night before the battle at which General W. S. Lytle fell. The two (Realf and Lytle) lay together in the General's tent.

They were both given to writing poetry at such times, and each had an unfinished poem on hand, and they read and criticised each other's efforts humorously for some time, when said Lytle:

"Realf, I shall never live to finish that poem."

"Nonsense," said I, "you will live to write volumes of such stuff." "A feeling has suddenly come over me," continued the General solemnly, "which is more startling than a prophecy, that I shall be killed in to-morrow's fight."

"As I spoke to you, I saw the green hills of the Ohio as I stood among them. They began to recede from me in a weird way, and as they disappeared the conviction flashed through me like the lightning's shock that I should never see them again."

I rallied him for his superstition, but the belief had become strangely impressed upon his mind, and he succeeded in so far thrilling me with his own unnatural fear that I begged him to finish his poem before he slept, that such fine work might not be lost to the world.

In the small hours the General awakened me from a slumber into which I had fallen to read to me that beautiful poem, which must live as long as our literature survives, beginning,

I am dying, Egypt, dying!

Edms the crimson red blood fast.
My eyes filled with tears as he read. He said not a word as he concluded, but placed the manuscript in his pocket and lay down to sleep.

Before dawn came the calls to arms. When I next saw poor Lytle he was cold in death among heaps of slain. I thought of the poem, and, searching the pocket where I had seen him put it, drew it forth, and it was forwarded among the other things to his friends.—Literary Life.

THE undersigned begs to call the attention of Planters and others who may want to move a succession of light loads for moderate distances to the system of TELPHERAGE.

By which a nearly continuous stream of sugar cane or other material may be moved by means of electric motors drawing buckets, baskets or other containers along a stationary steel rod suspended on posts, the power being supplied at a central station by means of a steam engine or water power working on electric dynamo.

This system does not profess to compete with tramways where the ground is suitable for such a mode of conveyance, but the circumstances under which its advantages are apparent are: Where the ground is very rough, uneven or rocky, or where the gradients are steep, as it has no difficulty in drawing a load up an incline of 1 in 10; Where the space for a tramway cannot well be spared, or over swamps or other ground impracticable for tramways.

It can be taken along the high road with as much facility and with little more obstruction to the traffic than by a line of telephone posts.

It has the advantages of the overhead wire rope system without its disadvantages, as there is not a long wire rope to drag with its attendant friction and loss of power, whilst it can turn on sharp curves.

The main line can be moved to different positions at a moderate expense. A line is now working at Glynde in Sussex.

For further particulars and cost, apply to
